

Table of contents

List of figures	7
List of tables	8
Transcription notation	9
Introduction	11
PART I. Theory: Construal, events, events in narrative
Chapter 1. Construal operations revisited and reconsidered
1.1. Construal views	23
1.2. Reconsidering construal	35
1.2.1. The role of attention in construal	36
1.3. More on salience and attention	43
1.3.1. Philosophy and psychology on attention	43
1.3.2. Attention, salience, consciousness in language and cognitive linguistics	50
1.3.3. Attention and consciousness – relations	52
1.3.4. Summary of attention and construal	60
1.4. EFL perspective and linguistic construal	61
1.5. Summary and conclusions	64
Chapter 2. Events
2.1. Objective	65
2.2. Defining events	65
2.3. Event partonomies and taxonomies	66
2.4. Event classification	70
2.5. Event, scenes, situation models and event schemas	77
2.5.1. Event in cognitive linguistics	81
2.6. Other schemas of events compatible with CG and CL	92
2.6.1. Complex events	111
2.7. Summary and conclusions	113
Chapter 3. Events in narrative context
3.1. Introduction	115
3.2. The narrative and events	116
3.3. Structure of events in a narrative	127
3.4. Event organization in memory	129
3.5. Conversational narratives CA	135
3.6. Summary and conclusions	139

PART II. Researching narrative events in EFL context

Chapter 4. Narrative events in video segmentation and oral video description of foreign language users

4.1. Introduction	143
4.2. Introduction to the pilot study of video unitization non-linguistic task	145
4.2.1. Task one – video segmentation	146
4.2.2. Task two – video retellings	154
4.2.3. Summary and conclusions	164

Chapter 5: Constructing causality: The use of subjective, objective and evaluative events in a narrative

5.1. Introduction	166
5.2. Study one: Story production task	168
5.3. Study two: Story comprehension task	175
5.4. Conclusions and discussion of narrative production and comprehension tasks ...	179

Chapter 6. Retelling of a video and picture sequence in Polish and English

6.1. Introduction	181
6.2. The task and its unit – sentence	181
6.3. Data coding	183
6.4. Analysis one: Sentences in story retellings, questions, hypotheses, results, discussion	185
6.5. Analysis two: Type of sentences and events in Polish and English retellings of story, introduction	190
6.6. Study three: Events in story retellings	196
6.7. Summary and conclusions of the quantitative analyses of Bolek and Lolek cartoon retellings	202
6.8. Multiple construals of selected scenes: Qualitative analysis	204
6.9. Summary and conclusions	216

Conclusions	218
--------------------------	-----

References	225
-------------------------	-----

Appendices	237
-------------------------	-----