Contents

Preface........................................................................................................................................ 7
Economist as Preacher. Or Technocrat. Or Dentist. Or How the Economists Advise......... 11
Re-reading of Thorstein Veblen’s The Theory of the Leisure Class in the Third Millennium. Some Remarks on Conspicuous Leisure and Consumption ........................................... 23
Alfred Marshall’s Puzzles (and How to Solve Them) .............................................................. 33
Gunnar Myrdal’s Take on Global Inequalities....................................................................... 49
Relationship between Economics and Ethics in the Thought of Mohandas Gandhi. An Attempt to Understand Contemporary India.................................................................................... 59
Selected Ethical and Developmental Issues in the Works of Deepak Lal & Alan Beattie...... 69
Economics as a Positive Science. Reflections after Reading Tomáš Sedláček’s Economics of Good and Evil ........................................................................................................... 81
Zygmunt Bauman’s Ethical Warnings in the Area of Economics. The Third Millennium’s Perspective ......................................................................................................................... 91
Political Corruption and Electoral Systems Seen with Economists’ Lenses ...................... 105
References.................................................................................................................................. 117