CONTENTS

The crossroads of cognitive science (Peter Gärdenfors, Piotr Łukowski) ......................... 7

Peter Gärdenfors, Cognitive science: From computers to ant hills as models of human thought ........................................................................................................ 11
Piotr Łukowski, Two procedures expanding a linguistic competence .................................. 31
Konrad Rudnicki, Neurobiological basis for emergence of notions .................................... 51
Frank Zenker, Similarity as distance: Three models for scientific conceptual knowledge .......... 63
Aleksander Gemel, Paula Quinon, The Approximate Numbers System and the treatment of vagueness in conceptual spaces .................................................. 87
Peter Gärdenfors, Jana Holsanova, Communication, cognition, and technology ............. 109
Jana Holsanova, Roger Johansson, Kenneth Holmqvist, To tell and to show: The interplay of language and visualizations in communication ................................. 123
Aleksander Gemel, Bartosz Żukowski, Semiotics, signaling games and meaning ............ 137
Dorota Rybarkiewicz, Out of the box thinking ..................................................................... 153
Annika Wallin, The everyday of decision-making ............................................................... 169
Magdalena Grothe, Bartosz Żukowski, Short- and long-term social interactions from the game theoretical perspective: A cognitive approach ............................... 181

Notes about Authors ........................................................................................................ 193